They object to the problem to he polycline anatomical book and the president being asked to name a committee of fifty to go to Albany on a purely political errand, and so they purpose to fly in the face of that action with their protest.

At the investigation of Morgue Keeper White, resumed yesterday before the Charity Commission, the deadly parallel parallel of documentary evidence was introduced and the case for the defence was not improved by the incident.

It showed clearly that White, instead of acting on the instructions which came officially from the Announical Board, through Doctor Wolsley, the chaleman, who makes the apportionment of bodies to the different colleges, which are part of the educational system of New York, went beyond his limits and disposed of the cadavers to such institutions as would pay for them.

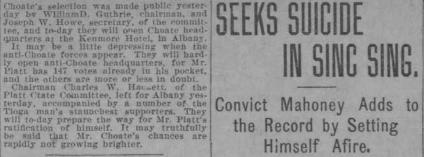

Notwithstanding the fact that from Dr. Burtenshaw, an instructor in the Thirty fourth Street Polyclinic Wais well supplied, while the regular municipal institutions, which do not pay for dissecting material, had to be content with a shoriage.

Dr. Burtenshaw was recalled to the stand and examined as follows:

OPEKA, Kan., Jan. 12.-The new Populist Governor, Leedy, in his first message to the Legislature to-day, devoted considerable attention to the adverse criticism on Kansas made in the East. Of New York he said:

"While according to the press of the nation's most populous metropolis her children linger in the streets untaught, except in the lore of the pavement, unfed except at the hand of charity, unhoused except in the kennels, they dispute with creatures scarcely less miserable, the Commonwealth of Kansas, rejoicing in a public school system which is the most graceful heritage we receive from our fathers and the best legacy we can leave our children, finds ample house room and school room for every Kansas child and for such straggling waifs as come to us for aid.

"With a cheerful audacity that almost challenges admiration, scribblers in semi-civilized foreign colonies like New York City and Chicago, with semi-barbaric splendor at the apex and semi-barbaric squalor at the base of their social life, have made puny and presumptious criticism of those whose shoestring they are not worthy to unloose. It was in Yorkville Court that Mrs. Marie Carroll told her story of want and misery. Her husband, John Carroll, is in Bellevue Hospital under treatment for rheumatism. He has been there three weeks. They lived at No. 338 East Thirty-third street in three rooms on the second floor. The rent was $10, and when Carroll is able to work he earns $11 per week sa a sweeper in a big dry goods store. Yesterday, the rent having been overdue half a month, Mrs. Carroll, her seven little ones, and her furniture, were put upon the sidewalk. The policeman on that post found the family sitting in front of their former home, knowing no one to whom they could appeal for assistance. He took them to Yorkville Court, where the children, all save the two eldest, were committed to the care of the Gerry society. Mrs. Carroll and her boys left the court to look for some refuge, willing to do any kind of work, but not having the least idea where they would sleep nor whence their dinner would come.

This fac simile was taken from Morgue Keeper White's private records of his disposition of bodies. The figures, "34," mean that the body was delivered to the Thirty-fourth street Polyclinic, where Dr. Burtenshaw paid $6 per corpse. The letter "C.," in the last column, means that the cadaver was cut, which indicates that it had probably been sent somewhere else before it went to Thirty-fourth street, as the official record shows that it was "whole" when it was directed to be sent to the University Medical College.
